Find out if justice reinvestment will work in your community

We are calling on the NSW government to implement a justice reinvestment policy as a matter of urgency.

Justice reinvestment is a data-driven approach to improve public safety, reduce corrections and related criminal justice spending, and reinvest savings in strategies that can reduce crime and strengthen communities.

Justice reinvestment is a good investment – both socially and economically. When justice reinvestment is implemented, it improves outcomes for individuals and entire communities.

Justice reinvestment is common sense.

NSW currently spends $237,250 each year on every young person incarcerated, and costs are increasing.

We cannot afford to continue down this path. There is a better way to invest our resources.

The time is right for the NSW Government to significantly shift policy and spending away from incarceration, towards prevention, early intervention and treatment for young people at risk.

NSW has an opportunity to take the lead in Australia in redirecting spending away from imprisonment and towards early intervention and prevention in a fiscally and socially responsible way.
